dear sir/madam

i understand the aec is considering moving the crangamite electoral boundaries further westward. this can only result in an imbalanced electorate and promote division within the area between the rapidly expanding population of the surfcoast and those living in the rural hinterland. for many years we lived under a virtual gerimander during the tenure of stewart mcarthur and very little was ever done for the 'coasters'. since 2007 we have assumed a marginal status, so evident in the current delayed result and have enjoyed far more relevant representation and an improved political process.

please reconsider this ill-advised boundary change.

yours sincerely
