SETTING NEW STANDARDS - THE LYELL MCEWIN HOSPITAL

News Release

The Lyell McEwin Hospital in Adelaide's north is set to become one of the most advanced hospitals in the world.

With the first stage of the hospital's redevelopment nearing completion, Premier Mike Rann has detailed some of the revolutionary building and design concepts being used at the hospital.

"The redevelopment is setting a new benchmark for Environmentally Sustainable Development (ESD). It's South Australia's first ESD project and only the second in Australia," the Premier says.

"By using a combination of common sense and creativity, the architects, engineers and builders at the Lyell McEwin are creating the most energy efficient hospital in the country.

- The hospital will consume 15% less energy than the average for all other hospitals in SA - our hospitals are already the lowest hospital energy users in Australia
- Use of solar hot water (min. 60% solar contribution) will reduce total energy consumption by 10%
- 80% of the vertical surfaces of the building are of materials which minimise reflectivity
- High performance glass is used to reduce air conditioning costs
- Waste heat systems will recapture at least 20% of total waste heat for use as pre-conditioning incoming outside air

"The hospital will also be one of the smartest hospitals in the world with a range of unique technologies incorporated into the design.

- The Intelligent Integrated Systems are believed to be a world-first in integration of building "smart systems"
- Cabling is of high digital capacity and flexible for future uses without the need for re-cabling
- All imaging records kept digitally so x-rays viewable on monitors around the hospital
- Real time energy monitors will be installed in the hospital foyer
- High frequency fluorescent lighting installed to reduce headaches and eyestrain

"By designing and building with the local environment and conditions in mind the new hospital will set new benchmarks for environmental friendliness.

- Rainwater from the large roof areas will be collected, treated and reused, reducing mains water consumption by 10%.
- Grassed surfaces around buildings have been maximised and paved parking areas minimised to help reduce heat loading
- Car parking is generally separated by open grassed and planted swales, which also act as low-energy storm-water conduits
- 100% of non-toxic materials recycled in Stage One demolition

"There's lots of talk about the need to be more environmentally friendly in the way we build our buildings, well the Lyell McEwin is showing Australia and the rest of the world how to put all that theory into practice," Mr Rann says.

Health Minister Lea Stevens says the Lyell McEwin Hospital redevelopment is the State's biggest capital works project.

"The $55 million dollar Stage A - Part One will deliver a brand new women's and children's area, with state-of-the-art maternity, obstetrics and gynaecology sections," Ms Stevens says.

"It will also have a new Intensive Care and High Dependency Unit and a Coronary Care Unit, again with the latest, state-of-the-art equipment.

"The first stage of the redevelopment is due for completion in July this year, with stage two due at the end of next year and the final stage likely to be finished in late 2006," the Minister says.

NEW DIALYSIS CENTRE FOR NORTHERN SUBURBS RESIDENTS

The State Government has given dialysis patients living in and around Adelaide's northern suburbs a major boost with the opening of a new Dialysis Centre at the Lyell McEwin Hospital.

Health Minister Lea Stevens will today open the Satellite Dialysis Centre, which will accommodate up to 40 patients from the North.

"That means the Centre can accommodate over 6000 dialysis treatments a year," Ms Stevens says.

"The indicators are that demand for dialysis services in the northern suburbs community will increase 28%-43%.

"From 1990 to 2000, the number of patients on dialysis in South Australia increased from 257 to 395– an increase of 154%. This increase is due to improved technology and medical care available to people with renal failure.

Ms Stevens says however, this is a lower rate of increase than the rest of Australia because of South Australia's high rate of transplantation (41 per million population compared to 27 pmp for Australia overall).

"Dialysis is an all-consuming treatment. Patients must attend their dialysis site three times a week, often for up to six hours at a time. This can be particularly demanding if there are long distances to travel.

"The opening of this Satellite Dialysis Centre means that patients will have their travelling time significantly reduced, as they will no longer have to travel to the city for treatment. This will be particularly beneficial for those patients who already travel from Gawler and the Barossa to access dialysis services.

"The new Centre here at Lyell McEwin sets a benchmark for the layout of other renal dialysis units," Ms Stevens says.

The Centre resulted from the Renal and Urology Clinical Services Review in 1998 and builds on the other services available in the State.

Minister Stevens will officially open the Centre at 9:30.
Lyell McEwin Health Service CEO Paul Gardner, Satellite Dialysis staff and patients will also be available for interview. Where: Haydown Road, Elizabeth Vale, SA 5112

A. The margin didn't change much this time, simply because 7
the territory I regained was territory I had once 8 before. Because of sheer logistics, the people who 9 live in Chandlers Hill (south of Chandlers Hill 10 Road in that area of Happy Valley), find it more 11 convenient for them to deal with me at The Hub, which 12 is two kilometres away if that, than to deal with the 13 Heysen office which is a long way away. So there was 14 an natural inclination for them to deal with me as I 15 was their notional member, and also I was their 16 real member some years ago. So I regained that 17 territory, but also that hilly part towards Clarendon. 18
As I indicated before, those people are likely to be 19 pro Liberal. I lost the northern part of Flagstaff 20 Hill, north of Blacks Road. Those people would be - 21 you would expect them to be pro Liberal because of 22 their socio-economic status. But if Fisher moved south 23 into Woodcroft or west into Reynella, you would expect 24 a pro Labor vote to increase, because the strongest 25
Labor vote is in the southern part of Fisher, around 26
Reynella East and Reynella East High School, just north 27 of Reynell Road. But if it moved north you would 28 expect it to be stronger Liberal and if it goes west 29 towards Trott Park and Sheidow Park then it would be 30 slightly more Labor than Liberal. So it depends 31 obviously which way you go. But traditionally the 32 southern part of Fisher has always been the stronger 33
Labor area, which is reflected in the polling booths. 34
But in Woodcroft that is slightly more middle income, 35 not so well off but not poor, and you would expect them 36 to be probably slightly more inclined towards Labor, but 37
and area that could be volatile in terms of voter 38
.CJG...00303 104 R.B. SUCH XN (MR BLACK) selection. 1
Q. That answer to a simple extent presupposes that people 2 are being put to a choice of Labor and Liberal. If 3 Fisher were south of Woodcroft, again in 2002, and 4 other voter choices were put to you as well, is there 5 anything from the last election which could assist the 6 commission in seeing whether those people would vote 7 for Bob Such, as opposed to one or other of the other 8
two candidates at an election. 9
A. Well, the critical factor is the boundaries of the 10
Messenger Newspapers. They have changed a bit over 11 time but the southern part of Fisher comes in the 12 Southern Times which has a different socio-economic 13 focus generally compared to the Hills Valley Messenger. 14

The people particularly in Flagstaff Hill, even those south of Blacks Road which is still in Flagstaff Hill, they have always felt some identity with the northern Blackwood area, which is the central point of the Hills valley paper. And the people down towards Reynella have an identity with the southern area. It is reflected in their preference for those papers and in fact they have campaigned and just re-aligned the boundaries of those papers, because the people say 'We want the southern paper in the southern area, we don't want the Hills Valley' which seems to have stories about Blackwood, Belair and Coromandel Valley as well as some stories about Aberfoyle Park. So the point I am making is that, in terms of being known as an MP, those local papers are important but they run two different agendas, if you like, in terms of stories. The Southern Times is taken to the population right down to Victor Harbor as well as people in Woodcroft and there is a different social/historical basis. A lot of the people in Aberfoyle Park are the offspring of people who have parents in the hills area. Having grown up in the hills and gone to school there, a lot of those offspring know me because I know their parents. So it is a bit like the Blackwood area which has got a distinct character to it, which I would say is English in orientation, compared to, say, the southern part of the electorate of Fisher around Reynella. The people are almost chalk and cheese; there are two different groups of people. That will be reflected in the identity, identifying with a candidate, and it will be reflected in their voting pattern. I think the people in Mawson - those people in Woodcroft - I don't think have established as strong a sense of community yet, it is fair to say, as in parts of Fisher and in parts of Davenport.

Q. Suppose the commission had to transfer electors from Davenport or Heysen to Fisher - I don't know whether that transfer would work out but transfer any of those - if the commission does prepare to calculation on a government and non-government basis, and assesses that you are part of the southern area, then the Fisher vote would be on a Dr Such versus the Liberals base, I understand that.

A. Yes.

Q. If the voting at Davenport would also exist on a government verse non-government basis, that would be Labor/Liberal. If votes come in to Fisher from Davenport or Heysen, would it be your view that that assessment is going to assist the commission in working out whether voters in Heysen or coming in from Heysen to Davenport are going to vote for you, or would the commission be greater assisted by looking at some other set of figures, for example, looking at other independents and votes for democrat candidates; people who are voting not just for the two major parties.

A. In the southern part of Davenport the population is going to increase substantially there; that is what the developer calls Blackwood Park and the district council calls Craigburn Farm. There are 550 homes there now and another 550 planned, so you can see on average two voters per household and more over a period of time as the teenagers grow up. So Davenport is going to have a significant increase in population and there is some likely increase in the Blackwood/Belair area. If the people in Flagstaff Hill that were in Fisher, north of Blacks Road, come back into Fisher, they are people that have been in Fisher for 12 years anyway, so they would obviously know me. That would obviously be an advantage in terms of being a candidate. Heysen is not so easy to geographically transfer those people in; I'm not sure where you would bring them from. You would have to start looking at areas like Ironbank and areas like that. Some of those people at Cherry Gardens have an affinity with The Hub, they go to school there or have been to school there, so I guess there is a limited grouping that you get from there. But Fisher as it is now is essentially built out. It may not look that way, but there isn't much in the way of saleable land. So the suggestion I make to the commission is to the suggested population increase of 900. I think that will be offset by the loss of teenagers and young adults. So I don't see that growth, Fisher as it is now - I don't see that its numbers will change much at all. I wouldn't see a need to radically change the boundaries because Fisher centres on The Hub, which is the natural focus, with the library, schools, shopping centre, all the fast food outlets; that is the natural centre for the electorate. So I wouldn't see any justification, although I am aware that Finniss, areas like that, are going to have a rapidly expanding population and there is a limit, clearly, as to where they can go. But, in itself, Fisher should remain basically the same.

.CJG...00303 106 R.B. SUCH XN (MR BLACK)

Q. If it was to change because of Kaurna.

A. It could, because of the ripple effect. It might seem strange, but some of those areas have a particular feel to them of a particular character. And, as I said in areas like Blackwood and Belair and Coromandel Valley those people would see themselves as completely different, certainly from people in the plains. That has led to differences over time within the City of Mitcham.

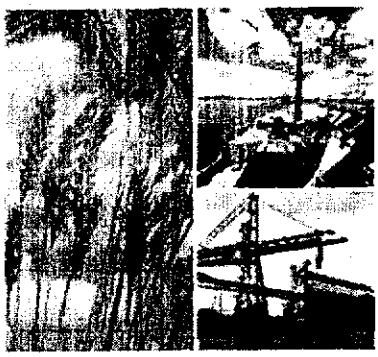
Southern Wharf Services



Created in November 2000 as a wholly-owned subsidiary of AusBulk Ltd, Southern Wharf Services Pty Ltd offers superior and competitive grain stevedoring services at Port Adelaide, Wallaroo, Port Lincoln, Port Pirie, Port Giles and Thevenard.

Southern Wharf Services, which also acts as a shippers' agent, complements the efficiency of AusBulk's ship loading operations around South Australia. Southern Wharf Services is the operator of bulk loading plant at six of AusBulk's seven grain terminals (bulk loading plant was purchased by AusBulk from the State Government in 1997).

Southern Wharf Services' office is located in Grain House with AusBulk, and can also be contacted through AusBulk's grain terminal offices.

Ardrossan to be upgraded to Panamax capacity

Leading Australian agribusiness, AusBulk, will spend up to $40 million upgrading its Yorke Peninsula Port of Ardrossan to full Panamax capacity, with deepwater and a wharf capable of handling the 80,000 tonne ships.

The development will deliver freight savings of up to $6 a tonne to growers in the Ardrossan catchment area.

AusBulk chairman, Mr Kevin O'Driscoll, said the development of Ardrossan together with the construction of a deepwater grain terminal at Outer Harbor, would ensure that all grain growers across the state had access to deepwater facilities.

"The ports are complementary as Ardrossan's catchment is principally local, while Outer Harbor, as the state's major shipping port, will service the eastern side of the state through into Western Victoria, taking in the South-East, the Lower and Upper North via existing rail networks," Mr O'Driscoll said.

He said Ardrossan's upgrade was part of the rollout of AusBulk's new five-year strategic infrastructure plan, which was designed to service the post farm gate storage needs of all of the state's growers as efficiently and as cost-effectively as possible. It was also designed to improve the viability of shipping 600,000-700,000 tonnes of dolomite through the port.

"Our strategic infrastructure plan has taken a sophisticated multi-dimensional approach in determining how the needs of growers can be best met after taking into account future production trends and estimates, clients and growers' changing service needs," Mr O'Driscoll said.

The plan relied on more efficient logistics management to extract the best value from the existing storage and transport network as well as innovative engineering solutions to minimise the capital cost of storage.

"The only way to achieve a more efficient supply chain is to take a holistic and integrated approach to both logistics and storage infrastructure and this is an important feature of our plan," Mr O'Driscoll said.

The company's decision to design and build an innovative new mobile rapid rail loader to benefit smaller grain sites (detailed in press release 13/3) was a practical example of this process.

Plans were well in hand to modify silos on Eyre Peninsula to enhance the viability of that region's rail system and secure freight savings for growers from more efficient rail/ storage interfaces. Improvements to the rail intake into Pt Lincoln would also enhance that port's reputation as one of Australia's best deep-water ports, capable of rapidly accumulating grain from tributary grain silos and loading Cape-size vessels

Mr O'Driscoll said AusBulk had prepared for the port upgrades over the past five years by investing more than $150m in up-country infrastructure to act as feeders.

AusBulk had more than 50 years experience designing bulk handling systems and managing logistics and this experience would be fully exploited to create a more efficient and lower cost supply chain for all of the state's grain growers as well as major marketers.

"We've taken a total system approach with our new strategic infrastructure plan and believe the plan's blueprint which focuses on development at Port Adelaide (Outer Harbor), Ardrossan, and Port Lincoln as major ports provides the least cost to all growers and a superior long term industry outcome for SA."

Mr O'Driscoll said other ports such as Wallaroo would continue to provide a valuable support role for the state's rapidly increasing production in pulses, oilseeds and smaller cereal segregations.

He said over the past twelve months growers had been exposed to a number of fanciful alternative greenfield options, however some of these were aimed at cherry picking regions and not serving all growers needs. These proposals were uncommercial and their cost represented a cavalier approach to using grower capital, which had been built up over decades.

"For example the combined development cost for Ardrossan and Outer Harbor is substantially less than the estimated cost of establishing a 'greenfields' port at Myponie Point and will benefit a much greater number of growers," he said.

"The Ardrossan development will also benefit local communities as it will reduce road damage and maintenance costs on regional roads by eliminating road movements of hundreds of thousands of tonnes of grain from Ardrossan to Port Giles, creating a safer operating environment on major road routes."

AusBulk's move to upgrade Ardrossan, a year after purchasing the port from One-Steel has been welcomed by local grain grower, Bernard Kenny who describes it as a major step for growers in the district.

"We have been talking with AusBulk about this for some time and we're pleased that they've decided to back the port development which will deliver significant benefits for the region."

Mr O'Driscoll said AusBulk would now produce detailed engineering and design specifications for Ardrossan together with environmental impact assessments required to proceed with the development of a Panamax capable port.

He said AusBulk hoped to be able to have the Ardrossan upgrade completed ready to ship grain from the 2005/6 harvest.

"Our commitment of major capital sums to the Outer Harbor and Ardrossan ports and investments in infrastructure across the state demonstrate AusBulk's continuing commitment to our core storage and handling business," Mr O'Driscoll said.
