To The Australian Electoral Commission,

I believe that we have sufficient memorials to Sir John Monash in the name of a major freeway and a prominent university, neither of which would be in the electorate proposed to be renamed in his honour. This is not to disregard his importance but simply to avoid greater confusion. Surely a simple local indigenous name could be found with significance to the region, going a slight way towards atoning for the wrongs done to the first Australians by naming the electorate after Angus McMillan in the first place?

Yours sincerely,
