Dear Sirs,

I was shocked to read of the proposed move to abolish the seat of Gwydir.

The new seat of Parkes would be totally unmanageable for one member to represent, the people scattered over such a vast area.

The electorate of Darling was reduced because of its size.

In big electorates one large centre tends to have all the clout, can control the vote and where the money is spent.

I lived in the old Darling electorate for many years, voted National-Liberal and had no chance of my choice being elected because of Broken Hill.

Never once did I see the member for Darling in Coonamble.

The rising cost of transport is becoming too great to allow voters to visit their M.P.

Please reconsider this absurd proposal.

Yours faithfully
Harold G. Gynn.
