Dear Sirs,

To quote a recent front page headline from the 'Land' newspaper - "What a joke!" I refer of course to the ludicrous proposal to abolish the seat of Gywydir + merge it into the seat of Parkes. What possible justification can be provided for making this mega-seat which covers 47% of our state? How can one member of Parliament physically represent this huge area. We are all aware that city-centric government is a fact of life but we are still on the electoral roll & pay our taxes so surely we should have some voice in running our state & country.

In this case 'bigger' certainly isn't 'better' & it seems ironic that in the recent NSW electoral redistribution the huge size of the State seat of Murray-Darling was reduced to make it more manageable.

I ask you to please re-consider this matter before a huge mistake is made & listen to the voices from ^{the} 'wilderness' - we are still here.

Yours faithfully,
Janice Cattle (MRS JANICE CATTLE)
