To the Committee,

I am very much opposed to the abolition of the rural seat of Gwydir and the combining of the two areas – Parkes and Gwydir – into a single electorate, an area of nearly half of NSW. If your committee recommends this action then they should be thrown out of government – the bush needs these voices in Federal Parliament for justice to be done.

Rural NSW produces an enormous amount of income for this state and for Australia, and provides huge amounts of food and drink for this land of ours and the world. The people who do this amount of physical and mental work must continue to have government members in each of these two existing electorates. If we have too many electorates in NSW, take one out of Wollongong/Sydney – people can walk from one to the next without hours of travel there.

Yours Sincerely,

Frank A. Brown
