Dear Sirs,

I strongly oppose the AEC's plan to abolish the seat of Gwydir (Federal) as part of redistribution of NSW Federal Electorates.

The abolition of a rural seat is detrimental to rural NSW, without Gwydir we will not have adequate rural representation in our Australian Parliament.

Is there some reason why a Sydney electorate could not be abolished, surely it would not have as drastic effect on the people.

If everyone leaves the Gwydir electorate, would not Australians suffer if depending on importing grain & food (exported food would not be cheap if we depended on it.) Also with the rising oil prices, the impending ethanol plant & new coal mines mean progress. Please reconsider.

Yours sincerely, Wilma Tudgey (WILMA TUDGEY)
