Dear Sirs

Assuming that those responsible for the redistribution are supposed to know what they're doing, their suggestion (the amalgamation of Graydon & Parkes) is utterly ridiculous & anti-social.

If those responsible had any <sup>self</sup> respect, they would not have made this suggestion. It lacks common sense if they had any self-respect they would not put their name to the document.

It is astounding that they have not added a note of explanation, as they must understand the law & can hide behind it the rules.

They must know that the law is an ass unless we are made for fools!

Common sense & discretion are both absent in this case, the document should not be signed until a note is added - Blind Freddie can see that & I'm blind!
