Dear Sirs

I enclose the Liberal Party's proposal relating to the Redistribution of Federal Electoral Boundaries in Victoria.

We have attached a written copy of our submission which includes detailed maps and CCD lists for each Victorian Federal Division as well as electronic copies of the maps and the CCD lists for each division of our suggested electorates.

If the need for further information arises, we would be willing to provide this in either written or oral form.

Yours sincerely,

Liberal Party Submission

Introductory Preamble and Methodology

The Australian Electoral Commission has determined that the 2010 Victorian Redistribution will result in Victoria retaining all of its 37 Federal Divisions. This means that with current population and projected growth each division will expand its average number of constituents by approximately 7,000.

In constructing the following set of new boundaries for Victoria, it should be noted that the requirements outlined in Section 66(3) of the Commonwealth Electoral Act 1918 have been complied with and these have formed the guiding principles of the submission from the Liberal Party of Australia (Victorian Division).

A new division was considered acceptable when the dual quotas of the redistribution were achieved, or when they were both within the allowed tolerances as set out in Section 66(3). It follows, that the full permissible variation can be employed to allow sensible seats to be drawn. There is no requirement that each seat must be drawn so that their actual enrolment has negligible variation from the quota, or that the projected enrolment should have negligible variation from the average divisional enrolment at the projection time.

In accordance with the provisions of the Commonwealth Electoral Act 1918, this submission follows the directions to ensure that new boundaries cater for growth as shown in the projections. As much of Victoria's growth is focused on the outer north-western suburbs of Melbourne and part of the north and south-eastern suburbs, these areas attracted extra attention and potential future growth has been taken into account when re-drawing boundaries in these areas.

The boundaries of Victoria's rural and regional seats are naturally constrained by the state's coastline and the state boundaries it shares with New South Wales and South Australia. This being the case the methodology used to re-draw these boundaries was to start at the state boundaries and work into the major metropolitan centre of Melbourne and its suburbs. This appears to be the methodology applied by the Boundaries Commissions in recent New South Wales and Queensland redistributions.

The rural and regional divisions of Victoria have been re-drawn along existing Local Government Area (LGA's) boundaries wherever possible. As population centres in these divisions can be located great distances apart, keeping to existing LGA's helps to create some continuity for constituents, a more acceptable understanding of where new boundaries are and also more realistic communities of interest.

Having been provided with the population projections for this redistribution, it is submitted that economic conditions, migration flows and the ability of Local Government to fund the necessary infrastructure to cope with projected growth will impact on the final population numbers at the given date of 17 June 2014.

The previous redistribution in 2002 showed that there was a significant variation between the projected numbers and the actual enrolments at the given date of 31 March 2006 – 135,102 less electors than projected. In fact the elector numbers projected for 31 March 2006 were not reached until 30 November 2009 when enrolments reached 3,475,334, as shown on the AEC website. The discrepancy of 135,102 electors would have significantly affected how boundaries were drawn. The Liberal Party respectfully suggests that in coming to its views, the Boundaries Commission examine carefully additional sources of information so that it has the most accurate possible data available to it.

As with the rural and regional divisions, where possible, metropolitan boundaries have been re-drawn along existing LGA's. This is however more difficult in areas where population is of greater density, therefore metropolitan and suburban boundaries have been constructed with natural and man-made features in mind.

Rivers, creeks and main arterial roads have been used as boundaries and community linkages – if a highway or main road services constituents on both sides it can be said that there's an ease of movement across this feature and a common community of interest. Where natural features such as rivers need to be crossed by new boundaries, we have ensured that there are an acceptable number of river-crossings to maintain an understandable community of interest for constituents. Where an existing division boundary already crosses a river or major road/freeway, then the new boundary has followed that precedent where applicable.

As has been deemed acceptable in past redistributions of Victoria where seats such as Maribyrnong, Wills, Gorton, Gellibrand, Higgins, Chisholm, Bruce, Holt, La Trobe and Scullin all cross major arterial road, there has been a need to cross these type of constructions in order to keep similar communities in the same seat. Consideration has also been given to keeping suburbs together, as residents usually know which suburb they live in and including whole suburbs in seats helps avoid confusion.

Ease of movement within the new divisions is also important and because of this the general shape and look of many metropolitan divisions reflect the direction and major roads and highways. This ease of movement for constituents also helps to create commonality between communities.

There will be occasions when the numbers may ultimately dictate a boundary that divides a community or fails to adhere to the concept of community of interest and there are instances where there are no other realistic options available due to the necessity to observe the numerical criteria.

Existing Federal division boundaries have also been used as a guide for the re-drawn boundaries in this submission. Though population growth and projected growth has meant that some existing divisions by necessity need to change, other divisions need only minor adjustments and using existing boundaries helps to create continuity and familiarity for constituents.

Under these suggested re-drawn boundaries, 83.11 per cent of electors remain in their current division.

The following submission from the Liberal Party therefore attempts, as far as is practicable, to re-draw the 37 Victorian Federal divisions with the criteria set-out in the Act. In particular those requirements outlined in Section 66(3) have formed the guiding principles for this submission.
