Dear Sir or Madam,

I should like to submit that should the need arise to create a new Federal seat in South Australia that it be named after:

Sir HOWARD FLOREY (1898-1968) this man was born in Adelaide, South Australia he was involved in the production of penicillin.
 "With British industries affected by World War II Florey took his process to the United States where private and government laboratories produced sufficient quantities to combat bacterial infection in wounded soldiers. For his work he was knighted in 1947, shared the Nobel Prize for Physiology or Medicine in 1945 with Chain and Fleming, was elected president of the Royal Society in 1960 and was created a life peer in 1965.

As you can see a local South Australian man quite worthy of having a Federal seat named after him and who has contributed towards improving the health of countless people since then with his involvement in the original group of people who discovered Penicillin.

Yours faithfully,
Aileen Radford
