I've always associated the Franklin electorate with the village and river. So it seems to me, that you got the Clark and Franklin names reversed. When you add the other Franklin "icons" in the community, it would seem the historical continuity would also continue if you swapped the names.

I've been in the Huon Valley since Feb 2003, so probably have a sentimental aspect to my thinking, which I'm trying to put aside to give a rational argument.

That would make Clark the East Coast, and hence you'd be retiring that more recently chosen name. I'm not in that electorate, nor do I know much about Clark beyond a quick Internet search relating to the TAS electoral system.

I'd prefer to leave it to others to argue about the Clark vs Tongerlongeter naming; except when pushed to have an opinion. Then I'd try to find a more pronounceable name, with a link to the area covered. Looking at the information you provide though, I don't see any geographic link to the East Coast and any of the Aboriginal people mentioned.

I guess it's good that I'm only one person, that way you don't have to act on my thoughts.

Voter ( I guess that's the relevant "title")
