FANNY BALBUK YOOREEL

“Described as the last of the Perth tribe, Noongar woman Fanny Balbuk Yooreel came to prominence through the writings of anthropologist Daisy Bates. Born in 1842 in the Upper Swan region, Fanny experienced the effects of European settlement firsthand, as she watched her bountiful country disappear beneath the infrastructure of colonial settlement. A very forthright woman, she is now recognised as both an agitator and defender of the rights and values of a fast disappearing people.”

I would like the new electorate to be named after an Indigenous woman.
